

Dacha Theatre's audacious theatrical feat is back with a brand new twist in Dice Keeper: Twelfth Night!

Dice Keeper: Twelfth Night plays in-person at Base: Experimental Arts + Space, March 31 - April 22

(March 3, 2023 - SEATTLE, WA)

Dacha is thrilled to present Dice Keeper: Twelfth Night, a twist on their original Dice series. In Dacha's innovative Dice format, an ensemble of actors memorizes the entire script of a Shakespeare show and the roles are randomized at the start of each performance. But this year, there's a brand new wrinkle: the Dice Keeper, who changes the directorial concept for each performance with no warning to the cast. Has he set the show in the Wild West or has he replaced all the costumes with hospital scrubs?

Watch the virtuosic ensemble face the Dice Keeper's challenges, all while attempting to earnestly tell the full story of the play! No two casts are the same, and no two performances are remotely alike.

Dice Keeper: Twelfth Night is a playful send-up of directors with over-imaginative interpretations of Shakespeare, and a love letter to all the actors, designers, and audiences who have endured their whims. With each new concept the Dice Keeper is convinced that this is the best way to tell the story of Twelfth Night — and by the end of the show, you may just agree with him!

The Dice format produces a novel show experience every time, and has audiences raving:

*"Based on the premise, you might expect a harried and unfinished production, but this show does not follow the rules of logic. There's beautiful blocking and choreography, constant and clever improvisation, and characterization that rivals—even surpasses—Seattle Rep's 2007 production of Twelfth Night. Somehow, they even pull off stage combat. This is magic."*
